

José Gonçalves (#4)

Beitrag von „OPM“ vom 3. Juli 2008, 19:21

Zitat

Hearts Part Company With 'Giant Talent'!

Hearts defender Jose Goncalves has gone on loan to German side Nuremburg for the next season.

The former Portugal under-21 international, who has earned such flattering descriptions as 'bomb scare', 'accident waiting to happen' and my personal favourite, 'fecking useless' from the Hearts support, has never been able to hold down a regular first-team place. Indeed popular belief is that the only reason he did so towards the end of the last season was simply to get him in the shop window for any prospective buyers.

The fact that many of us believe there was more chance of selling Goncalves if scouts DIDN'T see him in action was evidently inaccurate....either that or Nuremburg's people went to see another Jose Goncalves who fits the description that their coach Thomas Von Heesen gives him. He had this to say of his new signing:

'He brings everything along. He is a giant talent and a thoroughbred athlete with big ambitions'.

I wonder - is it actually the football club in Nuremburg that Jose has signed for? He's certainly a 'thoroughbred athlete', but in terms of football ability I really can't see what else in his skill set is worthy of the accolade 'giant talent'. Perhaps they're simply looking for someone to be the pace-maker on the running track for pre-season training - he'd be good at that!

Ah well - perhaps there's some talent in there that we simply haven't been allowed to witness due to the well-documented problems at Circus Tynecastle - who knows.

Jose's move is initially a season-long loan deal, with a view to making this permanent should things go well.

Alles anzeigen

